Orbium's Ian Woodhouse wins prestigious award at the Goodacre Systems in The City Financial Technology Awards*Orbium's Head of Strategy and Change, Ian Woodhouse has been awarded the Client Consultancy honour at the annual Systems in The City Awards presentation which took place at Merchant Taylor's Hall, London.

Ian's impressive work on Orbium's recent Wealth Management C-Level Survey and his wider influence on the private banking and wealth management industry was recognised by an independent panel of judges made up of industry experts and champions.

Accepting the award on behalf of Ian, Orbium's UK Head of Management Consultancy Services Alistair Shipp said: "Ian and Orbium are extremely pleased to win this award over some very strong and established competition. It is a testament to Orbium's ever growing presence in the market and our ability to deliver key business and technology initiatives. It is also recognition of our increasing contribution to business and technology transformation. Ian's recent work on the C-Level survey has given us even further insight into an ever-changing industry and is emblematic of the tireless work and dedication he puts into supporting the industry."

The Systems in the City Financial Technology Awards are the leading endorsement for suppliers of services and systems to the regulated financial services sector.

Awards organiser Goodacre commented: 'The Systems in the City Financial Technology Awards are an opportunity for industry system suppliers to be acknowledged and celebrated for their ongoing dedication to both the quality of their product, as well as their service. Featured organisations are those who are pushing the industry forward and driving essential innovation. Through direct client reviews and systems analysis, we isolate those organisations and individuals whose achievements stand out as examples of exceptional contribution. The Client Consultancy award highlights Ian's outstanding dedication to his clients and - in particular - his ability to understand their mission and provide critical, on-going advice and support.'
